

VESUVIUS HAS GROWN VIOLENT

General Eruption Of Famous Old Crater May Bury Many Cities in Lava.

PANIC OVERTAKES PEASANT FOLK

Lava Streams Dividing Pour Down The Mountain Side In Long Trails Of Destruction, Increasing Daily.

(By Associated Press.)

Naples, April 7.—The Boscorese has been surrounded by lava, one stream closely threatening Ottajano. New craters are opening in the volcano. The violent eruption of Vesuvius threatens to destroy a number of villages, and the inhabitants, panic stricken, are everywhere fleeing for safety.

Boscorese, a town of 9,000 persons on the southern slope of Vesuvius, nearest the crater, has been abandoned. The people seeking safety in the lava. The lava has been invaded by a stream of molten lava.

On the Pompeian side of the mountain the main stream of lava has divided into two, one threatening Ottajano, a commune of 20,000 inhabitants, and the other threatening Torre Del Greco, with a population of 30,000. The latter city has been destroyed by lava eight times in its history. It is only seven miles from Naples. In 1631 it was completely destroyed, and the present town is built on the old lava bed.

Vineyards Are Destroyed. The peasants of the town of Portici, at the west foot of Vesuvius, have cleared their grounds of vineyards and trees in the effort to lessen the danger from fire, and resisted the progress of the lava to their utmost.

Bosco Reale, to the eastward, is also threatened. Women of this village, weeping with fright, carried a statue of St. Anne as near as possible to the flowing lava, imploring a miracle to stay the advance of the consuming stream.

Many homes have been abandoned for the open air, although there has been a thick fog and an atmosphere has been dense with volcanic ashes and the fumes of subterranean fires.

ELKINS TELLS WHY HE OPPOSES HEPBURN BILL

Says Interests Of Shippers Demand Changes In Proposed Railroad Legislation.

Washington, April 7.—Senator Elkins declared himself the real exponent of President Roosevelt's railroad legislation ideas in a long speech which he delivered Friday. He opposed the Hepburn bill because it "doesn't go far enough" in protecting the people against domination of the railroads.

Mr. Elkins, who is chairman of the Interstate commerce committee, was very anxious not to be interrupted during the delivery of his speech, but Senator Tillman was lying in wait, and before he had proceeded far he shot questions at him. In response to them Mr. Elkins accused Tillman of showing friendship for the railroads. Later he called the Hepburn bill Tillman's bill, and when he of the pitchock denied responsibility for it, Senator Elkins retorted: "You have got it fastened on you with all the disgrace attending it."

Elkins and Tillman. "I repudiate the intimation that any disgrace is attached to the effort to secure a reasonable rate law," declared Tillman, whereupon his adversary said Tillman needn't think he was the only friend of the people in the Senate.

"I want it understood that I too am a friend of the people," declared Senator Elkins.

"I hope the senator from West Virginia is not disgruntled because some petitions regarding railroad conditions in his state have been sent to me by the governor of that state," was Tillman's answering thrust.

Mr. Elkins announced at the outset his desire to secure legislation that would secure to the people "a prompt and adequate remedy for the evils, injustices, abuses and wrongs of every kind practiced by railroads or in any way growing out of their operation," and continued:

"Stand for the People. I stand first for the interests of the people of my own state, and after that for the interests of all the people of the United States. I have no interest that can affect my judgment or prevent me doing my duty as a senator as I see it. My desire and highest purpose is to secure and serve the public interest. Because of my supposed interest in railroads, it is

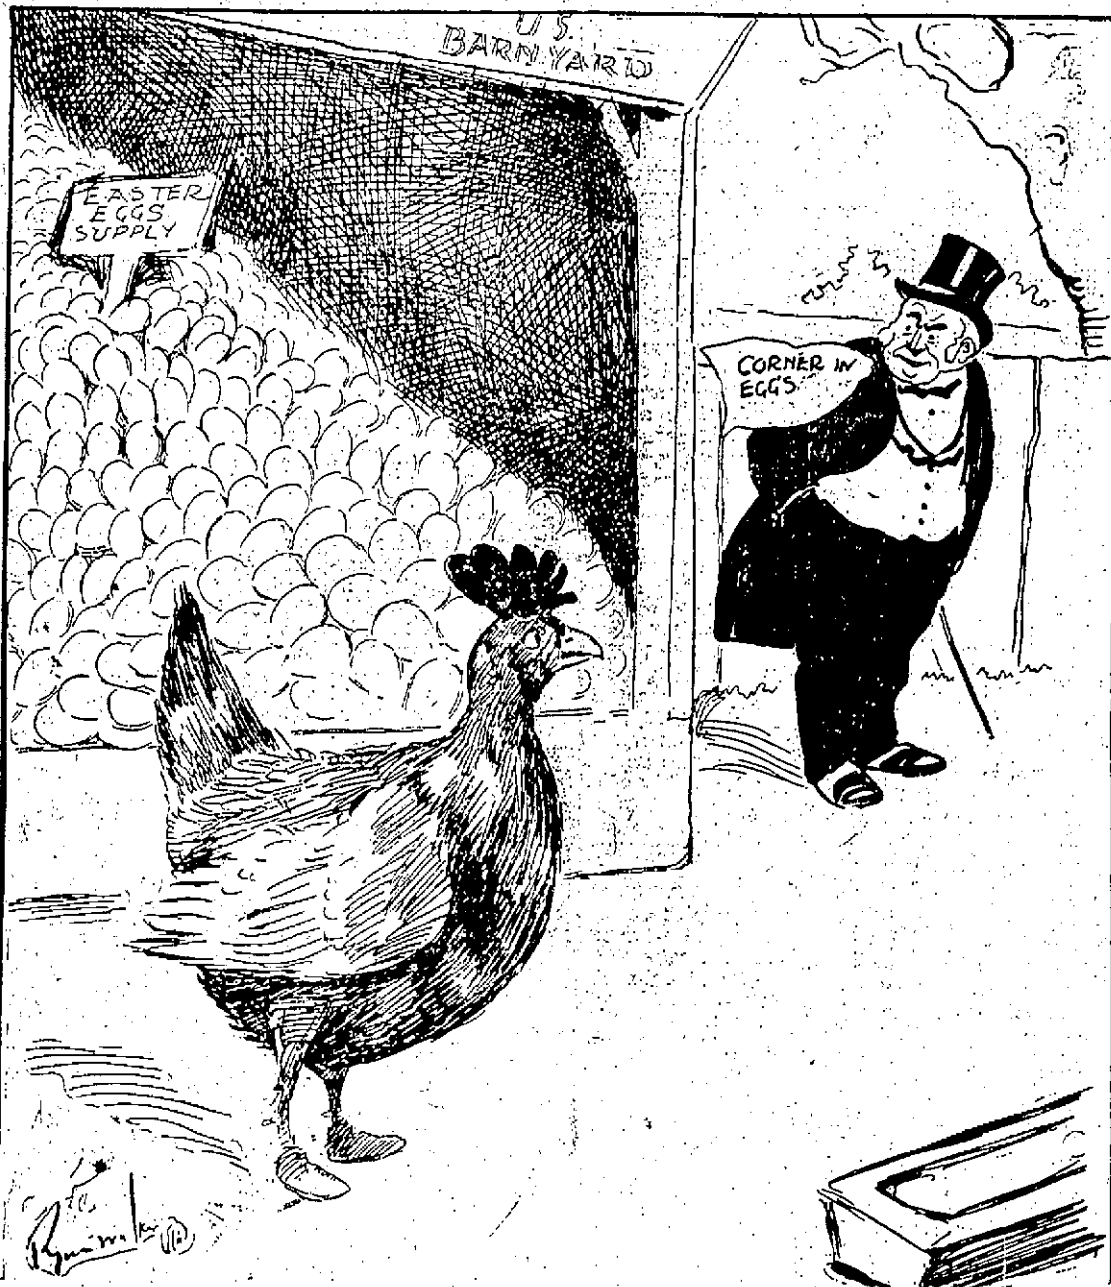

been a thick fog and an atmosphere has been dense with volcanic ashes and the fumes of subterranean fires. The churches are crowded day and night with people praying for deliverance from an impending peril, manifestations of which are heard and felt in explosions, which resemble a heavy cannonading, and in the tremblings of the earth, which are constantly recurring.

Grand Spectacle at Night. The main stream of lava proceeding from Vesuvius is 200 feet wide, and it advances at times at the rate of 21 feet in a minute, the intense heat destroying vegetation before the stream reaches it.

From the new crater, which is 29 feet in circumference, the lava has already gone two miles and a half. Hot mud, ashes, and black sand are also ejected, which, mixed with rain, produce the so-called caustic rain, which is most damaging to vegetation.

The scene at night is one of mingled grandeur and horror: as from the summit of Vesuvius there leaps a column of fire fully a thousand feet in height, the glare lighting the sky and sea for many miles. Occasionally great masses of molten stone, some weighing as much as a ton, are ejected from the crater.

Sir. Matteucci, director of the observatory, has had military engineers establish telephonic connection between the observatory and points within the volcanic activity. He said that, although the eruption presented grave menace, he did not believe it would reach the villages.

The Great American Hen—Well, I should cackle; There's that same fellow hanging around here again.

BADGER MONUMENT DEDICATED TODAY

Judge Jacob Fawcett of Iowa, Veteran of Wisconsin Sixteenth, the Orator.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Pittsburg Landing, Tenn., April 7.—The handsome monument erected to the memory of the Wisconsin troops who fought and fell on the battlefield of Shiloh was unveiled and dedicated today with impressive ceremonies. In the presence of a large delegation of state officials, veterans and other prominent men from the Badger state and a number of citizens from this vicinity, Captain F. H. Madgeburg, president of the Wisconsin monument commission, presided over the exercises, and Judge Jacob Fawcett, a private in the Sixteenth Wisconsin volunteer infantry and now a resident of Omaha, delivered the oration of the day. The Wisconsin monument is one of the handsomest of the state memorials erected on the Shiloh battlefield. It consists of a colossal bronze figure of a wounded soldier bearing a flag, and a woman bending over him tenderly removing the flag staff from his grasp. The figure is of heroic size and of great beauty. It stands on a massive granite pedestal, the sides of which are adorned with appropriate inscriptions and the rosters of the Wisconsin regiments which participated in the battle of Shiloh.

LABOR TO AGREE ON PARTY CANDIDATES

Illinois Unions Will Attempt to Swing Judicial Primaries of Democrats or Republicans.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Chicago, Ill., April 7.—A convention of representatives of trade unions and progressive societies will be held tomorrow to effect a permanent organization of the recently formed United Progressive Organizations of Chicago. Steps will be taken by the convention to prepare a plan of action whereby all voters belonging to labor unions and progressive associations will take a half holiday on judicial primary day, April 25, and go to the polls to select delegates to the conventions of both the democratic and republican parties who will support the nomination of candidates favorable to the cause of unionism. The capture of one or both of these political parties, it is declared, is the only practical method of bringing about changes in conditions now complained of by unionists.

POSTAL CONGRESS OPENED AT ROME

Establishment of an Universal Stamp Among the Questions Considered—Lower Rates.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)
Rome, April 7.—The sixth meeting of the International Postal Congress was formally opened in Rome today with delegates present from all the countries of the civilized world. Conspicuous among those present were Edward Rosewater of Omaha and Capt. N. M. Brooks of Washington, the official delegates from the United States. Captain Brooks is the chief of the bureau of foreign mails of the United States postoffice department, and as a result of his many years of service and wide experience he is regarded as one of the foremost authorities on postal matters in the world. The International Postal union, under whose auspices the congress is held, was organized originally about forty years ago by a few of the leading nations of the world, its first congress being held at Bern, which city still remains the headquarters and claiming house of the union. At the present time sixty-two nations are by treaty connected with the union, Afghanistan being the only country not a member.

The present congress, which is expected to be in session several weeks, will consider all those questions involving foreign mails and their transportation and postal appliances. One of the principal questions to come up is that of the rate for foreign postage, which at present is five cents for each half ounce, first-class. It is the general opinion that this rate is too high for the weight allowed. It is probable that the congress will decide on one of two things—that the rate of foreign postage be decreased to three cents, or possibly two cents for each half ounce of first-class mail; or that the weight of first-class mail permitted for five cents shall be doubled.

The question of devising a better system for the transportation of foreign mails will receive attention and the adoption of a universal postage stamp will also come up for consideration. In connection with the last named subject the congress will consider the system recently adopted by the Dutch government, namely, the scheme of keeping on sale in the postoffices of the principal towns a supply of stamps corresponding to the value of five cents of the principal countries of the world, which are sold at a very slight advance on the face value. This plan enables a writer in sending a letter to a foreign country, to enclose postage for a reply when desired.

DOWIE STARTS FULL OF FIRE

Leaves Mexico For Zion City With Party Of Five To Wreak Vengeance.

WIFE WEAKENS AT HIS APPROACH

Says She Will Receive Husband In Shiloh House Despite His Past Plans For A Big Harem.

Laredo, Tex., April 7.—John Alexander Dowie and five of his followers passed through this city this morning en route from Mexico City to Chicago. The party will stop one day at San Antonio. In a rage that threatens to leave him bald and beardless the prophet is speeding north to wreak vengeance on his enemies in Zion.

All the way up from the City of Mexico Dowie is reported to have left a trail of dark red anathemas. A reporter who boarded the train at San Luis Potosi and found Dowie storming in his car, telegraphs:

"Dowie is in a fine rage. He races from one end of the Pullman to the other, tearing his beard, rolling his eyes, denouncing his wife and son, and vowing vengeance upon all his 'pigs of enemies.' He declared that before the sun has thrice set the Lord will have shown his own anointed the way in which the blasphemers shall be routed and driven into the sea.

Lord Renews Strength.

"Despite the great mental strain under which Dowie has been laboring he looks well and eats well.

"He declared that the Lord had renewed his strength that he may give battle to the enemies of God and that until he has them beaten he will know no ill health."

Dowie wired from San Luis Potosi to Apostle Mary McGhee Hall of this city to engage a suite of five rooms at the Menger hotel for himself and a party of five. The rooms are in a remote corner of the hotel, where secret conferences may be held without fear of eavesdropping.

San Antonio is the home of 200 ardent and faithful Dowieites, who pledge their lives and worldly goods to the cause of the apostle now hurrying north to reclaim his kingdom. It is stated here that every detail of the campaign against Voliva and Granger and their followers will be planned before Dowie starts north from this city.

When Dowie left Mexico City he was in a state of the greatest excitement and made no effort to conceal his emotion. In reply to a question as to how the revolt in Zion City could be explained, he said:

Explains Disaffection.

"Now, how am I to explain it? I can only explain in this way—it is merely a guess, and I may be wrong, but I think I am right. They—my wife and son and all of them—thought I was going to die, and have been deeply disappointed. Apparently I am going to live and am on my way back home.

"They have done many things that were not right. Not that they were crimes so much as blunders; unwilling departures from my policy. Some of these departures were serious. They joined together to try to keep me from going home. I was not going home for two months anyway, but they did not want me then. Meanwhile, they were fighting General Overseer Lewis here, and Secretary Wilbrite on the Mexican proposition. We were generous to them in every way, but they were not generous to me. I loaned them, for instance, some resources that I had control of which came from various parts of the world, and gave them money to help them in Zion City.

"I may say that one of the falsehoods they are telling is that I am indebted to my bank. It is not true. I am the largest holder of stock in the bank, and when the bank was in need I have been always ready to help it. I may now say openly that what I could have taken from the bank legitimately I did not take. I left money to my credit and I gave my checks for many things, and allowed them to be charged up to me, which made my account look big, but which had nothing whatever to do with my personal expenses.

Purpose of Opponents. "Now, their purpose has been to throw dust in the eyes of the people, and they have succeeded. They made them think suddenly that I was a cruel tyrant because I did not want this young man to continue in office. I make it a rule not to have incompetents in office. I must do that—it is my duty—all business men must, and I don't consider him a competent man.

"The papers say that I am threatened with arrest if I dare to go back. Back I go, back I go on the road. You think I am going to allow that kind of thing to go on? Certainly I will go back. If I have done anything wrong, let me be punished. They say I have misused funds. If funds are placed in my hands for a number of years I have a right to use them, but I don't misuse them. I have $21,000,000 of estate behind all obligations of Zion after everything is accounted for. They say that this is one of the reasons why I am removed, so-called. Of course I am not removed. How can they remove me? How could anybody remove the president whom the people put there. It is ridiculous. No body less than office can remove higher in office."

NEW UNIVERSITY
Y. M. C. A. HOME

$61,000 BUILDING AT MADISON

NEARLY COMPLETED.

JANESVILLE BOYS MEMBERS

Edward Wray Is Vice President—C. V.
Hibbard Formerly Connected with Association.Madison, April 7.—Association Hall, the new Young Men's Christian Association club-house at the University of Wisconsin, which represents a contribution of $61,000, and the efforts of a strenuous building canvass, extending over five years, is practically completed, and will be dedicated about May 1.

Exterior Plan Is Simple.

The new building, with its six stories, built of white sand brick upon a Bedford limestone foundation, with its simple facade, in which are executed four square pillars, with its five broad balconies on the rear overlooking Lake Mendota which breaks less than one hundred feet away, makes a beautiful addition to university architecture; the area of the ground floor is 57x123 feet. The design was drawn by Leenhauts and Guthrie, Milwaukee.

Situating Near Gymnasium.

Convenient to the main buildings of the university on a lot 67x300 feet, extending from Langdon street to Lake Mendota and adjoining that of the gymnasium on the west, the new club-house has excellent advantages of situation. The site was purchased in 1898 for $3,000, part of which money was realized from a lot on the corner of State and Park streets which was formerly owned by the association and was condemned when the historical library was built. The rest of the money was secured by subscription and the debt was entirely cleared one year ago. The lot is now valued at $20,000.

Novel Features.

Novel features of Association Hall are a restaurant, open day and night, where meals and lunches may be purchased at a low price; a roof-garden on the rear of the fifth floor, which by means of a dumb-waiter is connected with the restaurant in the basement; a barber shop, and a bowling alley. Other prominent features are a game-room, which will be fitted with billiard and pool tables; and an auditorium with a seating capacity of six hundred, which may be increased to seven hundred by opening an adjoining lecture room. The auditorium has a raised stage, with dressing rooms at either side, thus forming a much desired place for the presentation of amateur theatricals. Moveable chairs were selected for the auditorium so that it could be used for a banquet hall.

Interior Arrangements.

Inside, the building is restful, roomy and attractive. The rooms are all admirably arranged. The first floor is given over to a reading room where low tables full of magazines and newspapers extend their silent invitations; a lounge room with cozy rockers; a fireplace and broad celess, a game-room for billiards and pool; the secretary's office, and a cloak room. Here are also found the Y. M. C. A. parlors, connected with a side entrance so as to be conveniently entered by the members of the Young Men's association. Two club-rooms, a lecture-room seating one hundred and sixty persons and the auditorium divide the room of the second floor. The three upper floors are taken over entirely by an admirable system of pleasant, private dormitory rooms for students. There are thirty-three of these, accommodating sixty-six persons and renting for $4.00 during the school year, which is alone sufficient to pay all the current expenses of the building, but which may be increased nearly $1,000 during the summer session. In the basement are the bowling alleys, barber shop, and restaurant, all of which will be opened next fall.The interior of the building on the first, second and third floors, is finished in weathered oak which extends over a low wainscoting about the walls. Above the wainscoting the walls are hung with green burlap which is bordered at the ceiling with a Grecian frieze. The public rooms are all supplied with fireplaces.
Steam heat and electric lights are used throughout. Provision is made for an elevator which will be installed at some future time.

Five Years in Canvassing

The canvass for the present building was started in the fall of 1900 under the direction of G. S. Phelps, Minnesota, 99. The real building movement, however, was commenced in 1890 when about $5,000 was raised and a lot on the present site of the historical library was purchased. This was condemned and the present lot secured in 1898. Up to this time the Y. M. C. A. and Y. M. C. A. had worked together, but in 1900 G. S. Phelps, who came as general secretary in 1899, moved the separation of the two associations, and the incorporation of the Y. M. C. A. The building subject was then discussed and in the fall of 1900 the active canvass was begun with G. S. Phelps as manager.
F. O. Leiser, '02, succeeded Mr.
Phelps in 1903 and until November 1, 1905, when the entire amount was pledged, he has had charge of the work. To Justice J. B. Winslow, chairman of the board of directors, belongs, however, the greatest credit for the work. A large part of the subscriptions were obtained by his personal solicitation. The other members of the board of directors, which has charge of the maintenance of the property and the building canvass are: Professor W. A. Scott, treasurer; Professor D. E. Riley, treasurer;
Mr. J. B. Winslow, treasurer; Mr.
J. M. Boyd, cashier of Bank of Wisconsin, Madison; Honorable W. D.
Conover, Marshfield.

Large Donors.

Among the large donors are: Chas.
P. Pfister, Milwaukee, $5,000; E. P.
Bacon, Milwaukee, $2,500; Lindsay Brothers, Milwaukee, $2,000; Mrs. U.
S. Pluney, Madison, $5,000 for furnishings. There were numerous subscriptions amounting to $1,000 and less, Milwaukee, Chicago and Mad-son contributing large sums. The alumni at Chicago gave nearly $3,000.
About $1,000 was contributed by the students at Wisconsin. The building cost $61,000 and of the $62,000 subscribed $55,000 has been paid. The balance has been raised by a $25,- 000 mortgage on the building and furnishings. The total value of the property is estimated at $100,000.
Many firms gave liberal contributions of furniture, namely: Sheboygan
Chair Co., The Crocker Chair
Co., Sheboygan; Buckstaff, Edwards
Co., Oshkosh; A. W. Schram and Sons, Oshkosh; F. A. Dennet of Wisconsin Chair Co., Fort Washington;
A. H. Haswell, Madison; C. V. Mac-Millan of Winnebago Furniture Co.,
Oshkosh; Haveler, Olson and Gregg,
Madison; University Co-operative Co., Madison, $250 to furnish one club room. Leenhauts and Guthrie, the architects, finished and decorated the entire main floor free of cost.
They also placed four double settees in the lounge room.

The Building Open to All.

The building is open to every student of the university, whether a member of the association or not.
But it is as a home for the association that it is particularly valuable.
The Y. M. C. A. has a membership of four hundred. More than three hundred members are enrolled in Bi-

CATTLE DISEASEDW. S. Heddies Loses $1,500 by Condemnation of Nearly Two-Thirds of Town of Fulton Herd.Twenty-one out of a herd of 32 full-blooded Guernsey cattle on the Hed-dies homestead in Fulton responded to the tubercular test applied by the state veterinarian's department last week and were condemned, appraised at $870, turned over to the state, sold to the Gross Packing Co. of Milwaukee at $50 a head, and sent thither to be slaughtered. W. S. Heddies has devoted several years to the work of getting together a valuable herd of Guernseys, buying registered stock from leading breeders in the west and paying fancy prices for most of them. As he expected to have some stock to dispose of soon he decided merely as a matter of form, to have the herd tested so that the proper certificates might accompany the sale.
The herd appeared to be in the finest condition. Among the number condemned were two registered veal-ing bulls, both of which had been sold at good prices. Mr. Heddies' loss will approximate $1,500.

Two Big Events.Col. H. V. Horton of Washington,

the Inter-State Fair association at Be-loft and will conduct two big events there during the summer and fall.
Col. Horton yesterday closed the deal for the property and he will begin at once on the plans for the fair, which will be held on the usual dates during the last week in August. The fair will be placed in the state circuit in which Beloit has been for the past several years. Col. Horton will endeavor to make this a special stock fair and all the energy of the manager will be directed to this end.
There will likely be no floral hall faves that the fairs are getting away from that idea and want more stock and racing. That will be the scheme at Beloit, to have larger exhibits of stock and racing of the highest order. In the latter part of September or the first of October a race meeting will be given at which Col. Horton will offer large purses and expects to bring better horses that have

"Everything is impossible until we see a success." Your own business is probably bigger now than you thought, "possible" before you became a shrewd (which means a "large") advertiser.

Janesville has been carnival ridden in the past.

The world admires a game fighter. Roosevelt is one of this type.

One often forgets a friend but never an enemy. People make enemies trying to do right sometimes.

Supreme confidence and self-assurance helps a lot of men through this world at very little expense.

Now that the circuit judgeship is decided we may next expect we may next expect the red-hot state fight.

Judge Grimm has been elected the next circuit judge of the twelfth circuit. Let the cruel war of the past month end now.

All the smaller towns about Janesville have gone dry. This ought to mean business for the police officers in capturing blind pigs.

Beloit newspapers are now recovering slowly from a vigorous city campaign. Some of the residents of that city evidently believe that the fight is not yet over.

This question of street commissioner is a serious one and not to be lightly dismissed by the new council. Select the best man possible for the place irrespective of factionalism.

Even in the heat of the past campaign the fact that the first district congressman voted to throw down the barriers on tobacco and sugar for coolie labor competition, has not been forgotten.

M. G. Jeffris is still attracting public attention as a candidate for congress to succeed H. A. Cooper. The office belongs to Rock county by right of pledges and doubtless the whole circuit will rally to Jeffris' support when the fight really begins.

The few preliminary skirmishes for points of vantage in the great state gubernatorial battle have not resulted in any serious accidents as yet. When the big guns begin to boom, then is the time for danger signals to be run up.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT.
In sharp contrast to the modern house of worship was the little warehouse on the shores of Peace river as it enters Charlotte Harbor on the west coast of Florida. It was Sunday morning and when the train at Punta Gorda stopped at the little wayside station, a tall, gaunt mulatto alighted and wandered down the beach.

Someone said, "he is a preacher," and the discovery was soon made that he was looking for a place to hold divine service. The little warehouse was selected at the most available spot and then he started out to drum up an audience for a 10:30 service.

Half a dozen colored and as many white families were in the neighborhood, but when the hour arrived it was apparent that the spirit of indifference to church-going is not confined to the north for the audience contained but two colored people, four white, young men, who came in their shirt sleeves, and six or eight guests from the hotel nearby, attracted by curiosity.

The preacher, however, was not abashed and seemed highly flattered with the character of his audience. He stood behind a pile of boxes, improvised for a pulpit, and looking over the scattered congregation, said: "We will open our service with the morning hymn," and then he read in rapid and sing-song voice, six verses of the old hymn "And Shall I Be to Judgment Brought."

Then he read from the bible the parable of the ten virgins, and picking up the hymn book said: "We will now sing the morning hymn." Then he lined it in the old fashioned way and started in. No one attempted to follow him, for that was impossible. Every word was chopped off short and the time reminded the hearer of a trip up and down a steep ladder. It was a revelation in music worthy of a place in the phonograph records.

The text selected was from the parable and read, "These shall go away into outer darkness," and the thought very crudely developed that everybody was on a journey and many without preparation.
In speaking of principle, he said that a man without it was like "wind and breeches." His hearers were exhorted to recognize Jesus as the son of God, and to love and serve Him faithfully. One argument advanced was that to be right with the "Old Man" in heaven we must be on the right side of His Son here.

After a short but earnest appeal he sang two verses of "The River Jordan," offered a brief prayer and then said that he was no beggar but if the friends present wanted to help along the cause they could do so. One of the guests passed the hat; the preacher counted the collection and thanked the audience for $1.76 and volunteered to preach for them again in two weeks.

The south is not lacking in this class of preachers, and no town is so small as not to support the little colored church. Some people endure religion; but the colored man enjoys it and enters into the service with all the zeal of his intense emotional nature.

This simple faith which incites grotesque service, is frequently criticized, but it meets the demands of a race not yet free from the blighting effects of thralldom and who shall say that it is not acceptable before the great white throne.

The age in which we live is ethical and forms and ceremonies are regarded as of more importance than emotions which spring from the heart.

One of the small and very select ethical societies now in existence, is located on an island in the extreme southern waters of Florida. It is known as the Teede society, and its founder gained some notoriety as a free love advocate in Chicago, some years ago. The Teede community numbers some four hundred members. They are cultured people and the literary entertainments which they give are said to be of the highest order.

Like Swinford, formerly of Rockford, Teede possesses the ability to attract a certain class of intelligent people who come to him with their property and join his ranks. They are so pure and possess intelligence of so high an order, that the vows of wedlock are not considered necessary. The men and women occupy separate dormitories, and the children playing around the grounds are said to be adopted. Yet these people are ethically religious.

Better the little chapel with its simple service, and ignorant worshippers.

SENATOR ALGER SERIOUSLY ILL

Michigan Man Has Heart Disease and Recovery Is Not Expected.

Washington, April 7.—General Russell A. Alger, former secretary of war and now senator from Michigan, is so seriously ill at his home here that none but members of his family are permitted to see him. He is suffering from valvular disease of the heart, and has alarming sinking spells. It is not expected he will recover. The general had a serious attack at Atlantic City recently, and since then has fallen rapidly. At that time Colonel Fred Alger was summoned from Detroit and received instructions from the senator as to the disposition of his great fortune. Because of the condition of his health, Senator Alger has written a letter to his friends in Detroit withdrawing as a candidate for re-election by the Michigan legislature, which meets Jan. 1 next.

AMONG THE POLITICIANS

Former Governor Joseph F. Johnston of Alabama, who has announced his candidacy for the United States senatorship, has been before the people of his state for many years, has served as governor through two terms, ran for the United States senate against John T. Morgan and was defeated, and made an effort to be elected governor for a third term, opposing the present constitution of the state, in which effort he was also defeated.

Charles F. Scott nominated a few weeks ago for congress by the republicans of the second district of Kansas, has now become a candidate for the United States senate to succeed Senator J. R. Burton.

The labor unions of Massachusetts are preparing to take an active and aggressive part in the next state election. An effort will be made to have the two older parties nominate candidates who are favorable to labor measures and when that cannot be done labor men will be nominated and the united efforts of their organizations will be exerted to elect them.

Washington gossip has it that Senator Carmack's chances of re-election in Tennessee over "Fiddling Bob" Taylor are now very bright. The contest is one of the liveliest that Tennessee has seen in many years.

Senator Tillman has circulated an address throughout South Carolina relating to his candidacy for re-election. He comes out in support of the dispensary liquor system, which promises to be the main issue in the democratic primaries next August.

The democrats of Kansas will hold their state nominating convention April 25 and the republicans will meet one week later. From all indications Governor Hoch will have another term.

Farmers Throughout Southern Wisconsin Are Busily Engaged in Turning Up the Soil.

Reports that spring plowing has been commenced in earnest have come from every portion of the southern Wisconsin farming regions. Though this is not particularly early it is interesting to know that seldom is the work entered upon so generally and so vigorously. The single and the gang plow with two shares are more generally used, farms being too small for the employment of a large gang plow.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Louisa Fellows

Mrs. Louisa Fellows, widow of the late J. A. Fellows, who resided for many years at the corner of Milwaukee and Wisconsin streets in Janesville, and one of the old residents of Rock County, passed peacefully away at the home of H. W. Peabody in the town of Janesville at 11 o'clock Friday morning. She was born in Franklin, New Hampshire. Funeral services are to be held Sunday afternoon and the interment will be made at Johnstown Center.

William M. Wright

William M. Wright, a well known insurance man who resided for some years on North Jackson street, Janesville, succumbed to a stroke of apoplexy at his home in Allgheeny, Pa., on the morning of Tuesday, April 3. There was no forwarding of his death and the announcement was a great shock to his aged mother and his son, George G. Wright, who resided in Monroe. The latter left at once for the east and was joined at Chicago by Paul Wright, a brother. Deceased was born at Becksville, O., in 1848 and located in Monroe forty-nine years ago. He was married Dec. 29, 1869, to Miss Ada E. Goid, who with the sons already mentioned and two more, William and Charles of Allgheeny, survive him. Two sisters, Mrs. A. L. Road and Mrs. Jess D. Adelman, reside in Monroe. As a young man, Mr. Wright studied architecture in Chicago and became interested in insurance in which business he became proficient and successful. He was auditor for several leading companies when he left Monroe to make his home in Janesville. From this city he subsequently went to Indianapolis and from there to Allgheeny, where he had been in the service of one of the great Pennsylvania companies for ten years past. He nearly lost his life in a railway accident over fifteen years ago and his spine was so badly injured that at that time that he was almost helpless for years. He was a genial, handsome man and is well remembered here by the older residents.

Mrs. W. J. Miller

Funeral services over the remains of the late Mrs. Hattie A. Miller were held from the First Baptist church at Afton this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock, conducted by Rev. R. M. Vaughan of Janesville. It seemed fitting that such a perfect spring day should mark the last rites over one whose life had been one of loving devotion to home and loved ones and the large number present and the profusion of floral offerings testified to the high esteem in which the deceased was held, as well as to the tender sympathy for those bereaved. A beautiful song service was rendered by a mixed quartet comprising Arthur S. Waite, Albert R. Waite, Mrs. W. N. Gilbert and Mrs. U. G. Waite, with Miss Edith E. Soper presiding at the organ. The hymns sung "Sweet Bye and Bye," "We'll Never Say Good-bye" and "Sometime We'll Understand" were of Mrs. Miller's own choosing. The pallbearers were T. M. B. Gunn, U. G. Waite, C. H. Hayner, Thomas Tracey, Dick Brickman and F. H. Otis. The interment was in the town of Rock County north of Afton.

Sells a Large Monument at Madison

Mr. Geo. Breese has reason to feel proud of the fact that he sold at Madison this last week a large $500 monument. It is of fine Barre granite, beautifully designed and cut, and is a credit to the firm that sold it. Mr. Breese came in competition with all the large firms in southern Wisconsin and the fact that he secured the contract speaks well for his stock. Another large job was also sold at Harvard, Ill., which demonstrates that the business of this firm is not confined to Janesville and the immediate vicinity, but extends many miles in all directions. Mr. Breese invites the public to call and see his stock.

If one keeps a diary of personal impressions and reflections it is always well to have it under lock and key. Also, it is seldom advisable to read another person's diary, even if it is carelessly left lying on a convenient shelf, unless invited to do so. There was a young man studying law in a Janesville office who moved west and left behind him with some other effects a book of these written soliloquies. Now it chanced that a well known society young woman of Janesville had frequently spent half days in the office doing clerical work for the lawyer who was often out of the city and who happened to be a relative. On these occasions the young man who was studying law was wont to lay aside the big dusty tomes and hie himself into the office where sat the young lady who had come in to do the clerical work and keep the office open. The young lady was always polite and imagined that, at some sacrifice of time and inclination, she was proving herself very entertaining. A week or so ago she was tidying up the office again and came upon the diary. With some curiosity she turned over the pages until she came to one of the days when she had been kind to him. This was the entry: "Tuesday, June 1. Wasted the whole afternoon talking with J. M."

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Halverson in the village of Fulton on Wednesday, April 4, a very pretty wedding ceremony was solemnized by Rev. Price of that place, the contracting parties being Florence May, only child of Mr. and Mrs. Halverson, and Elmer B. Garey of the town of Porter. They were attended by Christine Halverson of Rockdale, cousin of the bride, and Alva Garey, brother of the groom. Promptly at twelve noon the bridal party to the strains of Lohengrin's wedding march took its place in the parlor, where surrounded by smiles, flowers and ferns the words were spoken which made them husband and wife. The bride was daintily gowned in white French lawn and carried bridal roses. The bridesmaid was also dressed in white and both groom and attendant were dressed in the conventional black. After the ceremony about thirty relatives and immediate friends sat down to a beautiful wedding dinner at a table which was very prettily ornamented with smiles and carnations. Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Garey are very well known and popular young people and have the best wishes of a host of friends. They will make their home two miles west of Edgerton on a farm recently purchased by Mr. Garey.

"Don't you think that Janesville conversation is awfully local in its scope—that our talk must be dreadfully tiresome to visitors?" asked one young lady of a companion in the omnibus. "Yes, I do," responded the other, "and I do think it is an odd custom of the boys to get off in a corner by themselves and slug and speak pieces like professional entertainers when they are trying to make things interesting for the girls." "We village cut-ups will certainly have to mend our ways—they don't seem to be appreciated," exclaimed the young man who had been an attentive listener to the foregoing.

At the Jubilee Celebration of Ruth Zell Wheeler, which was held last evening at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wheeler, 305 South Bluff street, the following interesting program was rendered: Violin solo, Marguerite Thorne; piano solo, Frank Gleason; vocal solo, Mary Linden; piano solo, Clara Blodgett; reading, Helen Jeffries; violin duet, Marion Blodgett and Frances Lewis; piano solo, Norma Ryan; Ledgerger main, Eugene Colvin.

Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Fleck, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Cole, and Mr. and Mrs. B. E. McCormick, all of Broadhead, were Janesville visitors last evening. The Misses Louise Tannert and Olive Lee of Stoughton are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. B. C. Jackson, No. 4 Olive street.

Mrs. Geo. S. Parker and daughter Virginia are expected home tomorrow morning after a three weeks' visit in Duluth.

Miss Ethel Fifield is home from Milwaukee Normal for a week's vacation.

Mrs. Louis Levy is a guest of her sister, Mrs. C. P. Touton in Edgerton.

Mrs. James McGiffin went to Edgerton this morning to visit relatives.

Mrs. Frank Pechin of Chicago was a Janesville visitor yesterday.

Miss Elsie Taylor of Orfordville is visiting in the city today.

E. H. RANSOM DID NOT SEEK RE-ELECTION

It Was His Brother, E. C. Ransom, Who Was Defeated for Supervisor.

E. H. Ransom of the town of Bradford, who was a member of the county board of supervisors for twenty years and would have been made chairman, in all probability, had he not decided not to be a candidate again, was in the city today. It was his brother, E. C. Ransom, who made the race for the office and was defeated by W. C. Duthrie. This statement is made owing to the fact that the two names have been confused in the reports.

Fond du Lac property owners are in a row with the common council over the question of laying a brick pavement. Some property owners threaten to enjoin the city from beginning work on Fourth street. There are many property owners, however, who are in favor of a new street.

Two Women Fined. Eva Barnes and Laura White pleaded guilty to the charge of being inmates of a disorderly house in municipal court yesterday afternoon and paid fines of $25 and $15, respectively. The first named, stated that she intended to go back to her home in Illinois and try to lead a better life. The place raided by the police Thursday night was above the Chinese laundry on South River street.

OPERATORS SEEK TO SECURE A WIRELESS

Coal Operators Want De Forest Company to Install Service (By Associated Press.) (By William Wolff Smith.) (Special correspondence.) Washington, April 7.—About a dozen applications have been received by the American De Forest Wireless Telegraph company at its New York office for wireless apparatus to be used in the coal regions during the strike. On other, similar occasions miners, aroused to a pitch of desperation, have attacked and burned breakers and other buildings and destroyed costly machinery. Preliminary to such attacks they have cut the telephone and telegraph wires leaving the point to be attacked without means of communication with the outer world. This would not be possible with "wireless" telegraphy, as, of course, there are no wires to be cut. The plan of the coal operators is to establish central stations at each group of mines, with small wireless plants, and operators at various outlying points. All points could thus be in communication with the central station and with each other and at the appearance of a mob at any one place, assistance could speedily be sent. By the De Forest system the stations can not only be in touch with each other but with the outside world, as the De Forest company has commercial stations at Philadelphia and New York as well as in a number of other cities and works in connection with the government naval stations at Washington and elsewhere. Should an attack be made on a breaker thus equipped the "coal central" could be notified and the operator with one sending could convey the intelligence to half a dozen cities regardless of weather conditions or the attempts of the strikers to interfere. Through the naval station at Washington, President Roosevelt would be in constant touch with the situation and the De Forest commercial station will soon be in operation here.

The only obstacle to the speedy equipment of the coal regions with wireless telegraphy seems to be that the De Forest company may be unable to furnish the equipment in time because of pressure of orders. A shipment was made a few days ago to India for a dozen stations for the British government, which required night and day work to complete it in time. Additional contracts for ocean vessels and inland and coast stations, together with a rush order for the Arctic regions, make it doubtful if the coal equipment can be prepared in time. It is understood that if absolutely necessary the company will lend a few stations to one of the great coal roads which is very anxious to have them. The De Forest company expects also to shortly establish stations of its own at Lancaster and Scranton as well as other Pennsylvania points. Through them and the coal stations the press and public will receive the latest information of the progress of the strike. "Wireless" bulletins are already published several times daily in half a dozen cities.

"DICKY" REMP HELD REGULAR "KOMMERS" Hired a Hall, and Entertained His College Friends with "Dutch" Lunch.
[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., April 7.—Richard Remp, for four years center rush on the University of Wisconsin football team, head of many football battles at Madison, Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis and Ann Arbor, bade farewell to student circles last night as host of a function probably unique in University of Wisconsin history.
It was a large "kommer," a convivial social function said to be common in the universities of Germany. A large hall was hired, tables and chairs provided and an ample store of refreshments of mildly exhilarating character made ready. Some 125 students appeared in response to the general invitation circulated by Mr. Remp, and the occasion developed into one of unusual joy. The provisions were largely provided out of the pocket of Mr. Remp, but a generous donation from a La Crosse brewing company as a result of the recent municipal election victory of the "liberal" element over the "strict saloon closing" side, was extensively utilized by the host. There was singing and speeches. Mr. Remp bidding farewell to his many student friends and admirers. The affair was perfectly orderly, except perhaps, that the songs were quite loud and might have disturbed the thoughts of pedestrians on the neighboring streets. When the festivities had progressed for nearly three hours, Professor E. A. Birge, dean of the college of letters and sciences, and Professor Augustus Trowbridge, chairman of the faculty social committee, made their sudden appearance. The intrusion caused some momentary consternation. Dean Birge was visibly annoyed by the sight of many bottles and busy waiters. Mr. Remp bowed. Dean Birge replied sternly, "Mr. Remp, I see you in my office at eleven o'clock tomorrow morning. You'll do nothing of the kind, Dean Birge," returned the gladiator of the gridiron. "We have had our last disciplinary interview. If you gentlemen come here as my guests you are welcome. But if you come to mar the pleasure and good cheer of my party, you will please take your quick departure." The professors scrutinized the gathering for a minute and withdrew. But their visit had put a damper on the gathering and it shortly broke up. Some fear is entertained lest the faculty take action upon the incident and perhaps make it unpleasant for those who accepted the hospitality of Mr. Remp, but as there was no drunkenness nor any disorder connected with it, this fear is not generally entertained. The gathering was held in a hired hall, not in a saloon, and, therefore, the rule of the faculty recently revived against students entering saloons, will not apply. The occasion has given rise to the question of students who may wish to gather for social and convivial purposes.

ROTTEN TRANSPORTS.
Ship Builder Tells of Conditions of Vessels During Spanish War.
Washington, April 7.—Sensational statements were made Friday before the house committee on merchant marine by A. J. Cockran of Bath, Me., a sub-contractor in shipbuilding. He declared that during the war with Spain he was in daily dread of the announcement of a great catastrophe involving the loss of our transports, with all on board. "If you had had American vessels when that war commenced," he said to the members of the committee, "the government would not have been in the deplorable condition in which the Spanish war found it." In preparing for the hostilities the government had to buy rotten rat-traps of ships from foreigners. I swear that when making these ships over to transports I often drove my hammer through the rotten shells. It was a crime for the government to send our soldiers to sea in such hulks, but it was the best that could be done. The nation was fortunate, indeed, that no great disaster occurred to the transport fleet. The vessels were not staunch; they were rotten."

Plan New Executive Mansion.
Washington, April 7.—The proposition to build a new executive mansion for the president, which comes to the front regularly every two or three years, is being agitated again with much vigor. The present scheme is to lay out magnificent grounds and build a majestic residence on the heights near the northwest limits of the city. Chairman Barthold of the house committee on public buildings and grounds is enthusiastic over the project and predicts it will take shape in a few years if not at this session of congress. President Roosevelt also is declared by the supporters of the idea to favor it. The historic old white house, in the event that a new executive mansion is built, is to become the residence of the vice-president, according to one plan.

Conference Dates Clash.
Washington, April 7.—Either the Rio conference on July 21 or no conference at all was the dictum presented to Mr. Root by the indignant South American delegates after their conference, and the South Americans triumphed. This matter was thoroughly discussed at the cabinet meeting and so far as can be learned it was determined to notify Russia that the first half of July as a time for the Hague peace conference was inconvenient for the United States and that it would prefer a date later in the year.

Fate of Hazers.
Washington, April 7.—Secretary Bonaparte has requested Admiral Sands superintendent of the naval academy, to come from Annapolis to Washington to confer with him relative to the disposition of charges against thirty-five midshipmen who have been put on the "blacklist" by the academic board, which investigated having. Under the new law the accused may either demand their court martial trial or simply submit themselves to discipline.

Pensions for Unfortunates.
Washington, April 7.—All crippled and insane persons, children of deceased soldiers and sailors of the civil war who are under the age of 22 years are given a pension of $60 a year by a bill introduced by Senator Hopkins.

Oil Trust Hearing.
Washington, April 7.—The first hearing of the interstate commerce commission in its coal and oil investigation will be held Tuesday in the United States court-rooms in Philadelphia.

Apache Indians Are Ugly.
Washington, April 7.—The War Department's refusal to allow the Apaches at Fort Sill to go with a wild west show is said to be responsible for the trouble there.

HESPER

BY HAMLIN GARLAND

COPYRIGHT, 1905, BY HAMLIN GARLAND

CHAPTER XXII

RAYMOND looked back occasionally, half expecting pursuit. He could see in the valley below the town the gleaming white tents of the little army hesitant to march, and its plan of invasion seemed born of folly and madness. He spurred his horse down the trail to meet the night which rose to meet him from the valley like a chill, engulfing flood. An hour's brisk ride brought him to the open, and just at the edge of the peak he came upon a forlorn camp, a small tent under a fir, and a group of four men sitting about a fire. At their call he turned and rode up to them. They were an outpost of Munro's guard, a part of the cordon he had thrown round the peak and camp.

One of them knew him and, greeting him pleasantly, asked where he had been.

He replied with candor, "I've been down to the Springs to induce those 'leggers' to put off their expedition."

"What trick did you have?"

"None. They're coming."

Significant glances passed, and the freights brought out stern lines on their faces. At length Brown, the corporal, said solemnly, "Well, if they want fight they can have it. But say, Rob, does the captain know you're on the road?"

"There was a hullabaloo in town about you last night. A lot of the fellows think you went down to give away the camp, and some said if you ever came back they'd string you up."

Now, I guess you better stay here while I ride up and tell the cap you're here."

"I don't think that's necessary, but you might jog along with me if you want to go. Otherwise I'll go alone."

"Well, I'll tell you, Rob," said Brown in an embarrassed way, "these incoherents on the peak have got an awful slant against you and Kelly, and they're two or three fellows who are working against you underhand right along. You don't want to take no chances. They'll do you in if they can."

Raymond was impressed with Brown's earnestness and by the admirable loyalty of his fellows camped there in the snow. "Boys, what are you staying here for?" he asked. "This isn't a picnic. What do you do for?"

Brown answered, "We do it because we want to help these miners stand off the 'plutes'."

Raymond mused. "But you're friendly toward Kelly & Raymond?"

"Sure thing. You fellows are all right. You've punched cows, and Kelly is an old broncho-buster himself. But let me tell you this, Rob, we're going to need you and your men if these chaps come up here the way they talk or doin' with Gatling guns and all that. The boys have been rollin' logs for a fortnight. You can just about see it from here—just on that point."

"Well, suppose we ride along," said Raymond, and as he took a last look around his heart warmed to these rough souls who had taken sides in a quarrel not their own, moved by a blind desire to aid their fellows in a war against privilege and social caste.

Brown called another man out of the group to ride with them, and they started away. On the hill east of the town and overlooking the valley lights could be seen flickering. The corporal lifted his arm and pointed that way. "There they are building the fort."

Raymond's blood began to stir. His military instruction to freshen, and for a moment, as he paused there in the darkness, he understood something of Munro's joy in a defensive campaign, but he said aloud: "It's all a mistake. Brown. They can't afford to fight the sheriff. The law is on his side."

Brown grimly replied, "Well, we'll give him a little run for his money anyway."

Raymond smiled at the boyish quality of this remark, but made no comment upon it, and allowed himself to be led by a roundabout path to the west side of the town. At last his guide paused. "You're all right now."

"I wish you'd tell Jack I'm here and that I want to see him," said Raymond. "I'm much obliged to you."

"Oh, that's all right. Rob takes keer o

yourself. And the two men rode off.

"Good luck, boys."

As he rode up to Kelly's cabin and called out, "Hello, the house!" Matt opened the door and, with a lad on either side of him, peered out. "Is that you, Rob?"

"The very same, Matt."

"Well, now, wait a whilst and I'll come and put out your horse."

Mrs. Kelly called cheerily: "Rob, we're glad to see you safe returned. Are you hungry?"

He slid from his horse. "I am empty as a wolf in March," he replied. "Where's Louis?"

"Louis! He hasn't returned. Didn't you leave him at the Springs?"

"No. He left early this morning and Aunt thought he had hit the stage road for the camp. I hope he hasn't gone wrong."

This news took away a large part of his pleasure in the friendly hearth to which he was welcomed and, removing his outer garments, he bent to the blaze in silence while Mrs. Kelly spread some food before him.

Kelly listened to the news of Louis' disappearance with less concern. "He's run into some of Munro's men and is probably up at headquarters. He couldn't get lost. He knows the road. What's the word from the valley?"

"They're coming, Matt."

"When?"

"Tonight or tomorrow."

"I've been receiving delegations and posters and all kinds of warnings. It's been a lively day on the hill. They're building a fort."

"So Frank Brown told me. How do our men feel?"

Matt rubbed his chin. "They're a little uneasy, to tell the truth."

Mrs. Kelly interrupted. "Sit up and eat, Rob. Talk afterward."

Raymond could see that Kelly was disturbed and that he had something to tell which he did not care to have Nora know. It was plain that he no longer minimized the danger, and his face fell easily into stern lines.

Seizing the moment when his wife left the room to put the youngsters to bed, the big miner laid a sheet of paper before this partner. "What do you think of that?"

Raymond looked at the death's head warning, for such it was, with amazement. "It seemed at first sight a rough joke. In one corner glared the conventional crossbones and skull, rudely drawn, and to the right and beneath them sprang the word 'Beware!'"

All this was amusing, but the logic of the argument which followed gave him pause.

"This neutral business is played out. Either you are for us or you are for the plutes. If you are for the plutes, get out. If you are for us, stand in your men to help us repel the invaders. This is our first warning. Remember the Red Star!"

Raymond rose. "Let's go down to my shack. We can talk matters over there more freely."

"I'll be with you in a few minutes," answered Kelly.

It was warm in the cabin, for the faithful Perry had built a fire early in the evening, and after he had lighted a couple of candles and kicked the fire into a blaze the room resumed its cheerful glow, but he was too deeply disturbed over Louis' nonappearance to fully enjoy it. He took out his revolver and was examining it carefully as Kelly entered.

"Did you meet with any trouble, Rob?"

"None. Some of the committee of safety wanted to arrest me and hold me as hostage, but Barnett stood 'em off. I didn't see a soul till on my way back I came on one of Jack's picket posts, where I found four men camped in misery and eating snowballs for supper."

"Well, suppose we ride along," said Raymond, and as he took a last look around his heart warmed to these rough souls who had taken sides in a quarrel not their own, moved by a blind desire to aid their fellows in a war against privilege and social caste.

"I've been receiving delegations and posters and all kinds of warnings. It's been a lively day on the hill. They're building a fort."

"So Frank Brown told me. How do our men feel?"

Matt rubbed his chin. "They're a little uneasy, to tell the truth."

Mrs. Kelly interrupted. "Sit up and eat, Rob. Talk afterward."

Raymond could see that Kelly was disturbed and that he had something to tell which he did not care to have Nora know. It was plain that he no longer minimized the danger, and his face fell easily into stern lines.

Seizing the moment when his wife left the room to put the youngsters to bed, the big miner laid a sheet of paper before this partner. "What do you think of that?"

Raymond looked at the death's head warning, for such it was, with amazement. "It seemed at first sight a rough joke. In one corner glared the conventional crossbones and skull, rudely drawn, and to the right and beneath them sprang the word 'Beware!'"

All this was amusing, but the logic of the argument which followed gave him pause.

"This neutral business is played out. Either you are for us or you are for the plutes. If you are for the plutes, get out. If you are for us, stand in your men to help us repel the invaders. This is our first warning. Remember the Red Star!"

Raymond rose. "Let's go down to my shack. We can talk matters over there more freely."

"I'll be with you in a few minutes," answered Kelly.

It was warm in the cabin, for the faithful Perry had built a fire early in the evening, and after he had lighted a couple of candles and kicked the fire into a blaze the room resumed its cheerful glow, but he was too deeply disturbed over Louis' nonappearance to fully enjoy it. He took out his revolver and was examining it carefully as Kelly entered.

"Did you meet with any trouble, Rob?"

"None. Some of the committee of safety wanted to arrest me and hold me as hostage, but Barnett stood 'em off. I didn't see a soul till on my way back I came on one of Jack's picket posts, where I found four men camped in misery and eating snowballs for supper."

"Well, suppose we ride along," said Raymond, and as he took a last look around his heart warmed to these rough souls who had taken sides in a quarrel not their own, moved by a blind desire to aid their fellows in a war against privilege and social caste.

Brown called another man out of the group to ride with them, and they started away. On the hill east of the town and overlooking the valley lights could be seen flickering. The corporal lifted his arm and pointed that way. "There they are building the fort."

Raymond's blood began to stir. His military instruction to freshen, and for a moment, as he paused there in the darkness, he understood something of Munro's joy in a defensive campaign, but he said aloud: "It's all a mistake. Brown. They can't afford to fight the sheriff. The law is on his side."

Brown grimly replied, "Well, we'll give him a little run for his money anyway."

Raymond smiled at the boyish quality of this remark, but made no comment upon it, and allowed himself to be led by a roundabout path to the west side of the town. At last his guide paused. "You're all right now."

"I wish you'd tell Jack I'm here and that I want to see him," said Raymond. "I'm much obliged to you."

"Oh, that's all right. Rob takes keer o

yourself. And the two men rode off.

"Good luck, boys."

As he rode up to Kelly's cabin and called out, "Hello, the house!" Matt opened the door and, with a lad on either side of him, peered out. "Is that you, Rob?"

"The very same, Matt."

"Well, now, wait a whilst and I'll come and put out your horse."

Mrs. Kelly called cheerily: "Rob, we're glad to see you safe returned. Are you hungry?"

He slid from his horse. "I am empty as a wolf in March," he replied. "Where's Louis?"

"Louis! He hasn't returned. Didn't you leave him at the Springs?"

"No. He left early this morning and Aunt thought he had hit the stage road for the camp. I hope he hasn't gone wrong."

This news took away a large part of his pleasure in the friendly hearth to which he was welcomed and, removing his outer garments, he bent to the blaze in silence while Mrs. Kelly spread some food before him.

Kelly listened to the news of Louis' disappearance with less concern. "He's run into some of Munro's men and is probably up at headquarters. He couldn't get lost. He knows the road. What's the word from the valley?"

"They're coming, Matt."

"When?"

"Tonight or tomorrow."

"I've been receiving delegations and posters and all kinds of warnings. It's been a lively day on the hill. They're building a fort."

"So Frank Brown told me. How do our men feel?"

Matt rubbed his chin. "They're a little uneasy, to tell the truth."
